

Thousands Of Animals, Just Like This Little Girl, Are Longing For Love & A 2nd Chance.

Now that the holidays have passed, the "fa-la-las" have been sung, and the decorations have been put away, many unwanted "surprise Christmas gifts" are finding themselves in already-crowded city shelters. Countless dogs, cats, puppies and kittens (even purebred animals that well-intentioned gift-givers probably spent a fortune on) are sitting on death row, as the clock quickly ticks down.

If you are ready to adopt a pet - to take the responsibility to love, nurture and care for an innocent life - we urge you to consider either adopting from your local animal shelter or from a private rescue organization. Either way, you are helping to make a difference in the life of an animal who deserves a second chance. Countless precious animals like the ones shown here are waiting for your love.

Not Sure If You're Ready For The Commitment? Why Not Give Fostering A Try?

Private organizations, like the ones listed below, work tirelessly to rescue as many animals off of death row as possible. They care for these rescued animals until well-suited, loving, PERMANENT homes can be found for each one. The problem is, they can only rescue as many animals as there are volunteers or foster homes to care for them. That's where you come in!

The time to decide whether or not you are ready for the responsibility of a pet is BEFORE you adopt one. Being a foster parent gives you an ideal opportunity to learn more about cats, dogs and different breeds. Fellow volunteers are always available to answer questions and lend a hand. The idea of fostering may seem sad initially, but the opposite is true. Ask any foster parent. This is incredibly rewarding, life-saving work.
